Venkataramanan, S. N. The characters of the cotton boll in relation to its flowering period and position on the plant. Agricultural Journal of India, v. 25, pt. 3, May, 1930, p. 189-205. (Published by Government of India, Central Publication Branch, Imperial Secretariat Building, 3, Government Place, W., Calcutta, India)

"The variation of the cotton boll in the Uppam plant is seen to be one of decline in character as the season advances...The characters for which such decline has been noted are seed weight, lint weight, lint length and maturation period...Spinning tests also show that earlier picked cotton is better than the late pickings from the same field of a pure strain and is suitable for a higher standard of warp counts." - Summary.
